Property Description

Villa Meridiana is a rare coastal estate where classic Mediterranean architecture, sustainable systems and sweeping ocean and valley views come together with remarkable clarity. Set on 22,988 m² (~5.68 acres), the property offers true off-grid independence while delivering the refinement and livability expected from a luxury home in Costa Rica's Pacific region. This is a retreat designed for those who value privacy, long-term resilience, and a seamless relationship with nature. A Home Built for Comfort and Self-Sufficiency The villa has a gorgeous Mediterranean style; its builder was a notable architect in the area who came of age in Morocco who brought its beautiful architectural style to Guanacaste. The villa operates with a robust solar array, and a connection to the grid as well, for effortless redundancy. A private water source from a deep well, massive water storage, and advanced filtration ensure year-round reliability—ideal for homeowners seeking a fully autonomous lifestyle.
